Comstock and Gest Plan 14 Early Productions

"Aphrodite," a spectacular drama of ancient Egypt from the French novel of Pierre Louys, will be the principal offering of F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest during the coming theatrical season. This firm announced yesterday their plans to produce fourteen new plays during the next few months. "Aphrodite" will open at the Century Theatre on Saturday, November 1.

"The Light of the World," a dramatic play of modern times, by Pierre Saisson, a Frenchman, and adapted by Guy Bolton and George Middleton, will have a Broadway presentation early in the season. The problem of the returning soldiers will be featured in a comedy called "Welcome Home." It was written by Guy Bolton and Frank Mandel and the leading roles will be played by Ralph Morgan, William E. Meacham, Harold Pratt, Percy Helton, Harry Harwood, Robert McWade, James Gleason, Sue MacManamy, Beatrice Noyes, Marguerite Phil, Helen Barnes and Amy Ongley.

Mr. Comstock will produce his seventh annual Princess Theatre musical comedy early in the coming season. "Adam and Eve," a new comedy by Messrs. Bolton and Middleton, after a successful tour last spring, will be presented at the Longacre Theatre beginning August 18. Comstock and Gest are bringing over the entire London Queen's Theatre company, including Percy Hutchinson, to produce "The Luck of the Navy," one of the greatest successes of the current London season. After playing one week in Washington it will open at the Manhattan Opera House on October 6.

"Mecum," a fantastic spectacular extravaganza of the Orient, by Oscar Asche, will be produced by Comstock and Gest at the Century Theatre following the run of "Aphrodite," about March 1. This play is by the author of "Chu Chin Chow," who will come to New York to supervise the production. "The Cave Girl" and "The Checker-Board," a comedy by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, will be presented early in the season.

Musical productions of Comstock and Gest will be "See You Later," scheduled for the Casino Theatre in August; "Phi-Phi," a Parisian success, and "Bal Tabarin," from the Clunie Theatre, Paris. A musical version of "The Millionaire" will also be offered, with Harry Fox as Monte Brewster. These managers will also present a musical version of "The Dictator."

4,000 Graduates Return to Yale For Class Day

President Hadley Tells Them Reconstruction Plans Will Mar None of the Ideals of the University

Several Gifts Announced

One of $54,000 Is in Memory of H. B. Keep, Killed in War; Concert at Night

Special Correspondence
NEW HAVEN, June 17.—This was Yale alumni day in the university commencement programme and more than 4,000 graduates of the university took part in the exercises, including the general university meeting this morning, the separate class business meetings held at noon, the procession to the Yale-Harvard baseball game and the class banquets this evening.

Speaking before the alumni this morning President Hadley said the reconstruction plans of the university will mar none of Yale's ideals.

Thomas Dewitt Cuyler, of Philadelphia, Yale '79, presided at the alumni meeting, and speeches were made by Professor Bernard Perrin, '69, of New Haven; Irving Rew, '89, of Chicago; George Chappelle, '99, of New York; and Major Morris Hadley, '16.

At its commencement meeting Yale corporation voted to confer the degrees of bachelor of arts and bachelor of philosophy on all members of Yale College and the Sheffield Scientific School who satisfactorily completed at least two years of undergraduate work and who have given their lives in the service of the country. Gifts to the university announced at the same time were:

Securities worth $54,000 from Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Keep, of Chicago, in memory of Henry B. Keep, who died in war. Suggestion that the fund be used for infirmity endowment was made. $150,000 from the estate of Richard B. Sewell from the Richard Black Sewell fund; $50,000 from Henry B. Latham, '97, for an addition to the athletic clubhouse building fund; $50,000 from the members of the family of Anthony N. Brady for extra expense in completing the Brady laboratory.

Colonel Louis E. Beard, U. S. A., commander of the Yale artillery R. O. T. C., and his staff directed the marching of the parade of graduates which left the old football field for the baseball diamond at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Rev. William Adams Brown, '86, chairman of the Corporation Committee on Educational Policy, which recently made its report on university reconstruction, presided this evening at the "1492" dinner in the university dining hall, which eclipsed all former records for attendance, many of the sixty-odd classes returning for reunions sitting at classes at this dinner. Other speakers were Charles P. Howland, '91, of New York; Rev. Herbert D. Gallaudet, '98, of Bridgeport; Henry J. Fisher, '96, of New York, chairman of the Alumni Fund Association; and Ganson G. Dewey, of the graduating college class, chairman of the College Student Council Committee on Reconstruction.

After the class dinners this evening, at 10 o'clock, all classes and graduates assembled on the college campus for an alumni gathering, largely informal. A band concert was given by the 102d Regiment Band and 104th Regiment Band. A feature was moving pictures taken earlier in the day of reunion exercises at sit up and take notice when, after reading his ode, he

Your Town

FOR years the edges of Prospect Park have been going to waste as far as little children and their mothers are concerned. The trees lean over the iron railings on three sides of the park, making a fragrant canopy. But because there were no benches the women and children living near the park could not avail themselves of the surroundings. The families were compelled to walk several blocks to the entrances of the park and sometimes tired mothers stayed home. Last week benches were installed and their perpetual and happy burden attests their need.

launched into a vigorous denunciation of disloyalty.

Clearly and earnestly he arraigned the false doctrines that possess many people to-day, scored Bolshevism, anarchy and socialism, and gave solemn warning to all who might hear his words against following the false gods that masquerade as patriots. He was vigorously applauded at the close of his remarks.

Henry Flower, first marshal, and Charles Claster, chairman of the class committee, both members of the 1916 football team, and Francis W. Hatch, captain of the tennis team, headed the four hundred seniors in their procession to the theatre. Captain Hatch, who is class orator, exhorted members to assist in the work of helping to reconstruct devastated Europe. He said it no longer was possible for the United States to return to her former isolated position in the affairs of the world.

Robert C. Rand, of Rye, N. Y., read the class poem, in the absence of William R. Parsons, of this city, who has just returned from serving overseas. The poem, entitled "Ideals," follows: The world is filled with victory and tears; Triumph with fear and love with hatred blends.

Look well—for to the men of coming years A danger-laden heritage descends. One thread runs straight and still holds fast To mock each specious prophet that denies the memorial lesson of the past.

We know about the schemes of men and mice, And in spite of madmen's madder dreams, No sudden change can make a paradise, And that disaster lurks behind extremes. Some things should be and always have been so: What yours is yours, and what's mine is mine; Out of a shameless wrong no right can come; Nor robbery of justice be the sign.

At 4 o'clock the class marched in a body to the Stadium for other exercises. Frederick M. Warburg, of New York City, son of Felix M. Warburg, the international banker, delivered the humorous ivory oration.

The gleeful song several college melodies. Marshal Flower presented the senior class banner to Henry F. Colt, of Genesee, N. Y., the freshman president.

Soldier's Mother Gives Insurance as Memorial

Humphreys announced that a telephone message had been received from Mrs. Palmer, of Glen Ridge, whose son, John Oswald Palmer, a member of the graduating class, died in camp last winter, to the effect that she was giving the $10,000 insurance due her from the government to Stevens Institute as a memorial fund to help needy students seeking an education in engineering.

Thirty-six graduates were presented with their diplomas and the degree of mechanical engineer.

Drama

"Who Did It?" Opens at Belmont Theatre

There was a gun for every character in "Who Did It?" the mystery melodrama by Stephen Gardner Champin, which, after several postponements, opened at the Belmont Theatre last night. Such recklessness with small arms indicates that the play ought to be a Sullivan law for the stage. The mystery, which at first view seems rather sluggish, is prodded into activity by an extremely energetic district attorney, who being opportunely on the scene, brings out the fact that nearly every one present has a sufficient omni for the dead man to make them likely suspects. With these facts he brings so many guns out of hiding that the play turns into farce. It is as farce, and in certain moments of broad burlesque that the play is diverting. But, unfortunately, Mr. Champin has not the skill to hold the piece with any steadiness to either farce or melodrama. It careers rather wildly between the two, and a further difficulty is added by the fact that the complication of an actual murder stalks about in the play. The whole fabric of the piece comes down with a dull thud, however, when it is disclosed that the elaborate plot is all a piece staged by the heroine to prove that she can act in order that she may convince her husband that she is entitled to a career.

The same time the real murder is cleared up by an equally casual explanation.

"Who Did It?" is not above the grade of an amateur effort, and a good part of the acting matches it. Indeed, the effect was that of an earnest effort of a dramatic school. Beulah Poynter was comfortably professional in her characterization, and so were Peter M. Lang and Francis Morey.

Women in Industry

The army of the unemployed has a few women recruits. The war opened many fields of industry to women from which they show no inclination to retire, and the shortage of all labor has made it possible for them to hold their positions without detriment to returning soldiers and sailors.

Miss Eugenia Wallace, head of the Central Employment Bureau of the Young Women's Christian Association, had 1,249 offers for positions last week, many of which remain unfilled. Trained women are especially in demand and there is an unanswered call for financial and banking assistants.

The Title Guarantees and Trust Company, which employed thirty-five women four years ago, now has 700 on its books, and the National City Bank, which had fewer than thirty-five, now has 1,200. The compensation offered is higher in proportion, even counting the additional cost of living, than it was before the war, and opportunities open to women are of a higher class.

The demand for "household assistants" to work on the new eight-hour day schedule is more than 200 per cent over the supply.

"America" Is "Sung" by Signs

Twenty-one Graduate deaf and dumb institute

Twenty-one pupils were graduated yesterday from the New York Institute for the Deaf and Dumb at Fort Washington Avenue and 163d Street.

The exercises took place on the lawn overlooking the Hudson River, and in addition to an address by Isaac B. Gardner, principal of the school, there were exhibitions of the work of the graduating class and athletic drills by the younger pupils.

"America" was "sung" in sign language. "The graduates are equipped to take their place in the workaday world by thorough training in one of three trades taught by the institution," said Dr. Gardner. "These are printing, painting and carpentry. All of the graduates have already found positions."

Last Appeals Made to N.Y. in Scouts' Drive

McAdoo and "Big Bill" Edwards Urge Adults to Come to Final Day Aid of Boys in Their Campaign

Far Behind Quota Goal

Eleventh-Hour Rallies Are Expected to Place City in Organization Honor Roll

THIS is the final day of the Boy Scout drive. It is New York's last opportunity to supply the $1,000,000 and the adult membership of 325,000 the organization has asked.

William H. Edwards, chairman of the campaign in the city, yesterday issued a last minute appeal to the people of New York.

"I want to make an earnest appeal to the citizens of Greater New York," he said, "to do all in their power to make the last day of the Boy Scout drive a great success."

"If the Boy Scout movement can go into Pell and Mott streets, and make red-blooded American boys out of the young Chinese there, do you not think that your dollar is worth while?"

"Who knows what the future will bring forth? Let us ever prepare for the future, and if the future of America depends upon the boyhood of today, let us make sure we are not overlooking any obligations that are upon our shoulders."

"We want more Boy Scouts and fewer gunmen."

"Make this last day of the drive the most important thing of your day's work. See that you and all your neighbors do something constructive."

William G. McAdoo, national chairman of the drive, added his plea for a last great effort by the city to send the drive over the top.

"The Boy Scout campaign," he said, "is not for money to buy uniforms and Scouts buy such things for themselves. The drive is for money necessary to enable the Boy Scouts of America organization to carry its great work for boyhood into every home in Greater New York where there is a boy twelve years old or over."

"This movement has the unequalled endorsement of representative churchmen, schoolmen, statesmen, business men based upon a thorough knowledge of its constitution, management and aims. We urge upon the consideration and prompt action of every reader in New York and its suburbs the needs of the Boy Scouts of America for large and prompt support to make possible more rapid extension of its boy membership."

The campaign will wind up to-night with a mass meeting and rally in the stadium of the College of the City of New York.

The police band and glee club will furnish the music and Robert L. Moran, president of the Board of Aldermen; "Big Bill" Edwards, Police Commissioner Enright and others will speak. The doors will open at 7 p. m.

More than a thousand persons gathered at the steps of the City Hall yesterday at a scout meeting which Mayor Hylan had promised to address. The Mayor did not appear, but Mr. Moran read an address from him, in which Mr. Hylan urged all to support the campaign.

Others who spoke on various phases of Boy Scout life included Colin H. Livingstone, president of the Boy Scouts of America; Franklin K. Matthews, W. L. Young and Esign H. G. Horton, acting scoutmaster of St. George's. The Bay Ridge receiving ship band played.

Byron R. Newton, collector of the port, began yesterday to enlist all water front employees and harbor boatmen in the Boy Scouts. Before the end of the drive to-night he hopes
